The following table compares known differences between both editions of Bounce Touch. Bounce Touch was first publicly released on March 18, 2013 as "Bounce Touch 2D 2.0" for Android devices. Originally planned as a sequel to "Bounce Touch 1.5", the developer went on to announce that the game would be rebranded as "Bounce Touch 2.0" and would feature a 3D feel. The name of the sequel was officially announced on April 13, 2013 and the new version was officially launched on May 28, 2013 for iOS devices. On November 15, 2013 "Bounce Touch 2.0" (2D) and (3D) were removed from Google Play and iTunes App Store, respectively, and replaced with an older version of Bounce Touch called "Bounce Touch Lite". Bounce Touch Lite was designed to run on both Android and iOS devices without requiring users to use a second or third-party emulator such as BlueStacks or EmuNAND. On December 13, 2013, Bounce Touch returned to Google Play and iTunes App Store with the original "Bounce Touch 2.0". The game was updated to version 2.1 shortly after its return and has continued to receive updates each month since.

Reception for "Bounce Touch" has been mostly positive since its initial release in 2013. Gamezebo stated that "Bounce Touch is easy to learn, fun to play, and challenging enough that you'll still be playing weeks later." AndroidSPIN also gave the game a positive review stating that it was one of the better games released during their Holiday Season Guide 2013. Bounce Touch's main version (2.1) was downloaded more than 30,000 times and had an average rating of 4.4 out of 5 stars with a total of 10 reviews on Google Play as of May 2014. The most recent update (2.5) is still available on Google Play and continues to receive favorable reviews from players. Bounce Touch 3D was downloaded more than 20,000 times and had an average rating of 4 out of 5 stars with a total of 7 reviews on iTunes as of January 2014. As Bounce Touch 3D received little attention or promotion as a sequel to the original, many players who reviewed the app didn't seem to know about its relation to "Bounce Touch 2D".
