As for the game, it's standard, but well designed for it's genre. You have the classic "fight the leader" evolution: one for Link, two for Yugi, three for Joey, four for Tristan, five for Yami, six for Graham. Each one of them is leveled according to the number of wins in the daily duels. Each of the four stages are pretty much balanced, so you will not have an easy time, no matter what your character is. You will face a variety of enemies, which will vary according to your daily duel's outcome (if you beat or lose the duel). In the middle of the game there is a special event. Every day, the leader will do the duel against the four stage leaders and gain the advantage. The fight that follows will decide who is the leader. You will be able to learn new cards each time you encounter an event. You can start the game with three stages and three sets of cards, and you will have the opportunity to evolve your decks during the game and to add more cards. There are two different paths. The Standard Path: - You can play with the deck that was used to face the leader during the event. - You can play with the deck that was used to beat the leader at the stage of the event. - You can evolve your decks in order to face the next leader. The Advanced Path: - You will start with three stages and three sets of cards. - You will face four events and the current leader will win three events. - You will have the possibility to evolve your decks to face the new leader. - You will have the chance to face the new leader before the end of the game. The battles take place in a 3D environment. The characters are fully animated, and the card effects are quite good. You will be able to use your wand or use your soul to do the multiple effects. The screen is a little bit small, so keep that in mind when you play. Each duel is split in three phases: 1. When the first two cards are revealed, you will take the turn. 2. During the second phase, the two cards will be transformed into new cards that are used for the rest of the duel. 3. Once the last card is revealed, the duel will be over. The number of 82157476af
